Eagles gameday live stream

Photo: Tasos Katopodis (Getty Images)This weekend, more than 150 bands take the stage at this year's Lollapalooza music festival in Chicago's Grant Park, with headliners like Tame Impala, Twenty One Pilots, and Ariana Grande set to perform in front of a few hundred thousand attendees and amid the sweltering heat. (Last year, more than 160 festival-goers were hospitalized, for reasons that probably weren't limited to heat stroke.) If you can't join the party—or hate music festivals because of all the standing around and long Porta Potty lines—you can live-stream the festival on YouTube. Throughout the weekend long, Lollapalooza will be live-streaming performances from each of its three stages on three separate channels, just visit Lollapalooza's YouTube page to find each step's page. If you miss any performances, the first stage channel will also return shows from the previous day until Lollapalooza resumes during the afternoon. Thursday's performances are currently on the replay, if you want to catch up on sets of HR, Hozier or Strokes.Below are the set times for several performances, including some notable headliners (with all times shown in the CDT):And for a complete list of each step's lineup, you should visit that scene's YouTube page, which has a breakdown of times in its description; you can visit the festival's website for the Lollapalooza lineup in its entirety, too. Like other social media apps, Twitter has a live streaming option that allows you to broadcast video from within the app. Twitter live streams appear within Twitter apps and can be viewed by your followers and the public while broadcasting and afterwards via an on-demand Twitter video. Similar to live streaming on Instagram, Twitter users can interact with live streams via posting a message in chat or by using a heart emoji. The live stream feature is available on both iOS and Android versions of the Twitter app. A live broadcast can be made from within the official Twitter app for iOS and Android devices. A mobile or Wi-Fi signal is required and your account must be public. If your Twitter account is set to protected, you won't be able to live stream. If you have a lock icon next to your username, it means your Twitter account is protected. You can change your account to public by disabling the Protect your tweets switch in Settings and & privacy and security within the Twitter app. Open the Twitter app on your iOS or Android device and select the compose button, which is indicated by a quill and a plus sign. Tap the camera icon, and then choose Live. You will need to grant Twitter access to use your device's camera and microphone to continue. Select Add Location and select the location you want for the Twitter live stream. This location information is used to make your broadcast more discoverable by users in the Twitter and Periscope apps, and enter the text you want to join your live stream. This could be title of your broadcast or a casual message to your following encourage them to set up. Adding keywords and hashtags to your description will help your tweet pop up in Twitter searches. Select Go Live to immediately start your Twitter live stream. While streaming on Twitter, you can use the three buttons in the upper right corner to turn your flash on or off, switch cameras and turn the microphone off or on, respectively. You can also tap the icons in the lower-right corner to see who your viewers are. When you're ready to end your live stream on Twitter, select the red X icon in the upper-left corner. A confirmation option will pop up. Select Stop Broadcast to confirm the end of your live stream or Cancel to continue streaming. When you're done broadcasting with the Twitter app, a recording of your live stream saves on Twitter and becomes available to watch the request from within the first stream's tweet. This recorded live stream can be edited by tapping the video in the tweet and then selecting Edit Broadcast. From here, you can rename the title of your stream and even edit the start and end points by selecting specific points in the video timeline. Once all your changes have been made, select Save Changes to lock them in. Changes made to a recorded Twitter live stream can take about 15 minutes to spread across the social network. If you want to delete a previous Twitter live stream, all you have to do is delete the tweet that contains the video. This will remove the video on both Twitter and Periscope. Deleting a previous live stream from within the Periscope app doesn't delete it on Twitter. The Twitter live stream feature is powered by Periscope, a separate service owned by Twitter that is dedicated to broadcast-only video broadcasts. While Periscope's live video service is what makes streaming on Twitter possible, the periscope app is not needed to start a broadcast from Twitter and doesn't need to be downloaded on to your smart device. All this connection takes place behind the scenes and is not something the average user needs to worry about. Periscope accounts are identical to Twitter accounts despite the different app names, following a user on one will result in you following them on the other. Periscope live streams will also be broadcast on Twitter and vice versa. While the Periscope live stream app is not needed to broadcast from Twitter, it may be useful for finding other live streams to watch due to its enhanced search and detection capabilities. You can watch the full MTV VMAs show for free if you have an antenna or a cable subscription. Cord cutters can watch the entire live stream from a computer, tablet, smartphone or TV with a compatible streaming device and all services that offer MTV. Date: September 9, 2021Time: 8 pm ET/PT (The pre-show begins at 6:30 pm ET)Location: Barclays Center, Brooklyn, NYHost: TBDChannel: MTVStream it on: MTV, MTV.com, MTV app; AT&T TV nu; fuboTV; Hulu + Live TV; TV; TV; Sling TV; or YouTube TV MTV owns the rights to air VMAs, but you have plenty of streaming options to choose from and capture the entire show (plus pre-show antics). You can go directly to MTV.com for VMAs or you can stream VMAs to your phone, tablet or even TV streaming device with the MTV app. The app is available for iOS, Android, Amazon Fire, Apple TV, Android TV, Roku and more. Either way, you'll need to provide your streaming provider, cable, or satellite credentials to access a live stream of current MTV programming. There are a number of streaming services that offer MTV in their programming. For everyone, you just need to log into your account on which device you are using and find MTV at the specified times. The following services that offer MTV all offer free trials of some kind so if you don't already have a streaming service, you can try one out that you're watching. This means that it can be difficult or even impossible to use these services if you live in a restricted area. To get around these limitations and stream VMAs, you can try using a virtual private network (VPN). However, not all VPNs can bypass region locks. Even if you manage to avoid a region lock, a streaming service may insist that your billing address matches your physical location plus you're in a supported geographic area. Most VPN services have free trials so it's worth a shot if you really can't access a live stream. If you live in an area where MTV is not available even through any of the available streaming services, then there is no official way to stream awards show. But you might be able to turn to less official funds to watch awards. Unofficial streams are less reliable and usually lower in quality, but they exist. Sources like Ace Stream, for example, allow you to stream events like VMAs directly from other viewers. Other sites provide similar streams that you can watch without downloading anything at all. To use this method, wait until the date of the awards and search the internet for VMA's Ace Stream content IDs or unofficial VMA live streams. Before you visit unknown websites in your search for this type of content, install a good ad blocker and antivirus software. Watch out for malicious pop-up ads, and never enter your email address or credit card number. You are on your own if you try this path; use these types of services at your own risk. Cutting cable isn't too hard—unless you're watching sports, in which case it's a nightmare. Huh989 over at Hackerspace want to know: how do you stream sports, and are sports packages out there worthwhile? Cable TV is insanely expensive, and with all the cheap video services out there, it's easy to cut... merPhoto by Ed Yourdon.I am two things that, until recently, have combined to reduce my quality of life.
